

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. 6 Sword of Myles Standish.

Presented by William Trumbull Williams, of Lebanon, Conn., with the following certificate:

I, Ezra Standish, of Bozrah, in New London County, Connecticut, do certify, according to my best knowledge and belief, that the sword presented by William T. Williams, of Lebanon, in said State, to the Pilgrim Society, in Plymouth, in Massachusetts, was originally in the Standish family, and was brought up from Duxboro' by my great-grandfather, as I have always been informed (Samuel Standish), and has ever been considered to have been the sword of Captain Myles Standish, one of the first settlers of the Plymouth Colony, and my ancestor—and I have no reason to doubt the fact. Ever since my remembrance it has been in the family, and has ever descended to the oldest son. My cousin, Lodowick Standish, sold it to said Williams. It was always called the ANCIENT SWORD, and was always considered as a valuable relic. Lodowick is gone to Canada. The hilt of the sword is not the same that was on the original sword—the old hilt was larger, and was called a basket hilt. The blade has on it the figures of the sun, moon and stars, and I think the figures 1149 in a circle, and on the blade letters or characters with which I am unacquainted.

EZRA STANDISH.

BOZRAH, the 27th day of September, 1894.

NEW LONDON COUNTY, BOZRAH, 27th September, 1894.

Ezra Standish, aforesaid, personally appeared before me and made oath to the truth of the aforesaid facts.

Sworn to before me

WILLIAM T. WILLIAMS, Jus't Peace.

"Inscription and History of the Sword of Myles Standish."

This sword is, without doubt, of ancient Persian manufacture, called by the Orientals Dharban, viz. Meteor; and the material of which it is made is thunderbolt iron. There is not the least doubt that this sword fell into the hands of the Saracens at the time of the defeat of the Persian tyrant warrior, Kozoori, when Jerusalem was wrenched from him by the Khalif Omar I., 637. The inscriptions and emblems show clearly the above facts. On closely examining the sun and moon engraved on the blade it will be seen that faces were engraved inside the sun and moon, and on closer examination of the faces it will be noticed that the engraver did not intend to represent them as human, but lions' faces. History says that the sun, moon and stars were worshiped by the ancient Persians as the celestial deities of strength and power—the sun predominant, and the lion the terrestrial emblem of the sun, whose head, surrounded by his shaggy mane, resembles the deity he represents.

The present Persian coat-of-arms is derived from the mythology of their predecessors; the sun rising on a lion's back, crowned with the moon and with a circle of stars around her.

Ancient swords and other weapons were said to have often been made from meteoric iron, and it has always been believed by the ancient as well as the modern orientals that that material had an invaluable virtue of good luck in it and a charm to its possessor. It is said by Arab historians that the Prophet (Mohammed) and his successors were armed with Dharban swords; that when grasped against the enemies of the religion of the faithful the warrior had nothing to do but face the enemies—the sword would do the destruction. It was believed by them that the virtue of the metal would strengthen them against fatigue of the muscles, and charm their lives from the attack and thrust of the enemy.

The three inscriptions, as seen on the blade (one on the same side with the Persian emblems, and the other two on the other side), were engraved by the Mohammedans, and at a much later period than the Persian emblems. They are each different in hand and form. The first named of the two is the Mediaeval Cufic.

The interpretation is: "With peace God ruled His slaves, and with judgment of His arm He gave trouble to the valiant of the mighty courageous"—meaning the wicked. On the reverse side of the blade are the two above-mentioned inscriptions, part of one of which only can be deciphered: "In God is all might." The last line that resembles Roman numerals, is not intended for a date, as one would be led to suppose, but it is of private signification, not known to anybody excepting the possessor, who had it engraved. The same with the other on the same side with the Mediaeval Cufic. No one can decipher it, as this is the key to the charm, and when once deciphered by anybody besides its real owner it becomes as valueless as a reed. Before closing our remarks let us notice above the two separate inscriptions; and here we find engraved again a combination of circles, intending to represent fire, and a conical shaft, to remind one of the meteoric metal of which the blade is made.

N. B.—It is not to be wondered at, then, that European and American scholars have failed to decipher the above. Even a medium Arabic scholar—and he more advanced than any foreign scholar in the vernacular language of his country—cannot decipher all the modern handwritings without giving an especial time and hard study, the Arabic language being so divided in itself, unlike any other in the world. Anyone brought up in one calling cannot decipher the hands of others, and it will at once be seen how difficult and impossible it would be for any professor or scholar to master a language that needs almost a lifetime to acquire it perfectly.

Having endeavored to serve the owners of this valuable relic of the past, in giving a faithful interpretation of the inscription thereon,

I remain, with the greatest respect, their obedient servant,

JAMES ROSEDALE, of Jerusalem Holy.
